Surgery News

Dr Clair Carpenter's retirement from Mill Road Surgery marks the end of a remarkable chapter in Colchester's healthcare community. For many years, she has been a trusted, compassionate presence, offering care and guidance that touched countless lives. The Patient Participation Group would like to extend a heartfelt thank you for her dedication, professionalism, and kindness. Her commitment to patients and the wider community has left a lasting legacy, and she will be remembered with deep gratitude and warm wishes for the future.

Staffing

We can confirm that Dr Hein Leonhardt will take the role of senior Partner of Mill Road Surgery from February 2026, and we are pleased to confirm we have recruited a new GP who will be joining us in spring.

We are also saying goodbye to Jan, our receptionist, who retired in November after 8 years with Mill Road Surgery

AccuRx Triage system

Following the increased availability of our AccuRx Triage System from 1st October, we have seen a substantial rise in the number of online requests being submitted. While this is a positive step in improving accessibility, it has also resulted in a significant increase in demand. As a result, patients may experience longer waiting times after the initial clinical review, particularly for non-urgent issues. To help managing a demand and ensure patients are directed to the most appropriate form of care, we strongly encourage individuals to consider alterative NHS iservices when suitable. Many minor illnesses and common conditions can be effectively managed outside of the GP surgery,

Pharmacy first services are available locally and can provide direct advice and treatment for a range of conditions, including earache, soar throat, and urinary tract infections.

Patients may also find support through NHS 111Which is available online and b y phone 24/7 for urgent advice when the GP surgery is closed or when patients are unsure of the best place to seek help, in addition, many areas provide community services such as physiotherapy, mental health support, and social prescribing, which may be accepted which may be accessed without needing to see a GP.

Covid / Flu Vaccinations

The majority of the Autumn We are pleased to confirm that, thanks to the continued support of the PPG and surgery staff, we have successfully completed the majority of our autumn COVID and Flu vaccination campaign. COVID vaccinations are no longer available: however, flu vaccinations will continue to be offered at the surgery until March 2026. If you wish to book a flu vaccination, please contact our reception team.

Experts have shared how this year the seasonal flu virus could be worse than seen before, as it beats our immune system. The virus mutated over the summer and appears to escape some of the immunity barriers our bodies have set up. The flu season has started a month earlier than usual this year and the message comes just days after the NHS issued an "urgent SOS" warning with flu cases already on the rise.

Children heading back to school after half term, with the days and nights starting to get colder, saw a major rise in flu cases in the UK. Weekly infection data, released by the UK Health Security Agency, confirmed a surge driven by kids - which experts fear could now move up through older populations.

Professor Lewis warned the current mutation and the H3N2 group of the influenza virus was a particularly bad one with a potentially dangerous impact for some people. The expert said: "H3 is always a hotter virus, it's a nastier virus, it's more impactful on the population."

The NHS has urged the public to get vaccinated in a worrying "flu jab SOS", warning the public Britain could face its worst flu season on record this winter.

Dr Mary Ramsay, Director of Public Health Prog at UKHSA, said: "While it is still early in the season and difficult to predict with certainty which flu strains may dominate, early data on the strains circulating to date suggest that a 'drifted' H3N2 subtype may become dominant, as has been reported in other countries.

DON'T WAIT VACCINATE

Preparing for snow and winter weather

Take these steps before winter arrives, or when snow and cold temperatures are forecast:

Do your shopping early and stock up. Make sure you have food and other essentials like a first aid kit, batteries, and a torch.

Check on vulnerable people. Neighbours, family, and friends may need extra support.

Invest in a snow shovel or a supply of gritting salt. If heavy snow is forecast, you can use them to make paths and driveways safe. Sand or cat litter can be used instead of gritting salt.

Get your heating system checked. A plumber can carry out a service and give you advice on how to get your heating working efficiently. Cold air can be bad for your health, and the NHS advises heating your home to at least 18 degrees.

Draft-proof your home. Use draft excluders on doorways and check for gaps around your windows to stop heat escaping. If they're small, you can seal up gaps yourself using caulking, or if you are unsure contact a professional.

Regularly check your boiler pressure. On most boilers your pressure gauge should be between one and two bars. A service before winter arrives will help too.

Make sure radiators are on to prevent pipes freezing. Frozen pipes can leave your home without water and cause flooding and damage. Every room should be at least 7 degrees with the ones you're using 18 degrees or over.

Plan. Snow and ice can make travelling dangerous or stop you from leaving the house, so be prepared to stay put for a few days.

Don't take risks in treacherous weather. Carefully consider the journeys you plan to take and keep basic supplies in your car in case bad weather arrives early. Stay informed, especially if travelling.

Get your home and property winter ready when snow and winter weather arrives.

Be careful of black ice on roads and paths. Walking on compacted snow can also be slippery. Check our basic first aid tips in case of slips or falls.

Be aware of falling snow from roofs or high places as it begins to melt.

If you're stuck at home and cut off, try to stay warm and safe. Use our money-saving tips to keep you and your home warm even on the coldest winter days and nights.

Try to enjoy it! There's no reason not to have fun when snow arrives but, be aware there are extra dangers involved.

BOWL CANCER SCREEING

Bowel cancer screening involves a Faecal Immunochemical Test (FIT) kit sent to your home to check for hidden blood in your stool, which can indicate early bowel cancer or polyps. In the UK, this is offered every two years to eligible adults, typically those aged 50-74, to detect the disease early when it's easier to treat.

The screening uses a Faecal Immunochemical Test (FIT) kit, a simple home test you use to collect a small sample of your stool (poo). You collect the sample at home and mail it to a laboratory for testing. If your results say no blood was found then nothing else needs to be done and you will receive another test in 2 years. If your results say you need further tests then that does not always mean you have cancer. Follow up appointments with a specialist will be made to check inside your bowel, probably by a colonoscopy.

Early detection:

Bowel cancer screening is currently offered to everyone in the UK aged 50-74. If you're in this age range and registered with a GP, you will automatically receive a FIT kit at home every two years. For people aged 75 and over, you can call the bowel cancer screening helpline on 0800 707 6060 to request a test kit.

If you're within the main age range and haven't received a kit, you can also call the helpline for assistance. It helps find bowel cancer early, even before you have any symptoms. Early detection and treatment of bowel cancer can significantly improve your chances of a successful outcome.

New Mum? Congratulations from all of us at Mill Road Surgery!

Hi, I'm Amy, part of the Patient Participation Group here at Mill Road Surgery. I'm 39 and became a new mum at 37. While having a little bundle of joy is truly amazing, it can also be incredibly tough—especially as the days grow colder and the nights longer. Luckily, our local community offers a variety of groups within walking distance. I found this especially helpful for two reasons: walking did wonders for my mind and body, and I didn't have a car while on maternity leave. Here are a few groups you might find useful (details below).

Local Community Groups

If you'd like help finding more local support, please reach out to our social prescriber.

Hartbeeps – Tuesdays at Myland Parish Church Hall. Book online: http://www.hartbeeps.com (cost attached)

Essex Family and Wellbeing Service -

Looking After Yourself

I didn't realise just how important it was to care for myself in those early days. For me, the shower became sacred—a moment to reset and breathe. It might be something different for you, but try to find a small pocket of time each day to check in with yourself.

After coming home from hospital, I felt completely upside down. It was easy to focus on everything that felt hard—crying, wind, sleepless nights (the list goes on). I started a simple habit: at the end of each day, I'd think of three things that went well. Sometimes it was just having a shower, stacking the dishwasher, or grabbing a 10-minute nap while my baby slept. These small wins helped me stay grounded.

People often say "make the most of them being so young," but when you're exhausted and overwhelmed, that's easier said than done.

Your Six Week appointment

Every birth is different, and during pregnancy I heard my fair share of horror stories. If you feel the need to reflect or ask questions, please do raise them with your GP at your six-week check-up.

My GP was kind, informative, and sympathetic. We even laughed about how smartly I'd dressed my son—he could tell I was a first-time mum! I arrived with a bad back and my brother-in-law was assisting by holding the baby, and the GP took time to focus on both of us. It was a great opportunity to check in and discuss practical things like birth control (which might feel odd at the time, but it's helpful to know your options).

After this appointment, you can get your baby weighed at clinics across North Essex. I visited different ones to switch up the scenery and get some fresh air.

Please book your 6-week check-up online on the Mill Road Surgery website.

I wanted to write this article to offer a real, yet reassuring perspective on being a new mum. Here are my top three tips I share with anyone who asks:

Get a RADAR key – These open disabled toilets across the UK, where baby changing facilities are usually located. You can buy a pack of 3 online for around £5.

Check in with yourself daily – It's okay not to feel like you're in a "new-born bubble" all the time. Talk to someone about how you're feeling.

Take a walk each day – Whether it's 5 minutes or an hour, fresh air can really help when your days and nights start to blur together.
